Read collection overview

The Jug Band visionary Jim Kweskin was one of the major lights of the 1960s folk revival, and an influential figure in Americana music since. A native New Englander, Kweskin was born in Stamford, Conn., in 1940. As a student at Boston University, he was drawn into the Boston-Cambridge folk scene and inspired to learn the guitar, developing a ragtime-blues fingerpicking technique that he inflected with jazz and blues that became a bedrock style of the folk revival. Following a sojourn in California, he returned to Boston in 1963 and formed the Jug Band with Fritz Richmond, Geoff Muldaur, Bob Siggins, and Bruno Wolfe, later joined by Maria Muldaur, Mel Lyman, Bill Keith, and Richard Greene. The Jug Band developed a national following performing pre-World War II American music, laced with a sense of humor and 1960s sensibility. At the height of their popularity, the Jug Band dissolved in 1968. For several years in the 1980s and 1990s, Kweskin was relatively removed from recording, but he resumed work as a soloist, as a member of the U & I Band, the Texas Sheiks, the Jug Band; and as fellow performer with a long list of artists. A rich record of eclectic musical tastes and a passion for American music, the Kweskin collection offers important documentation of a major figure on the folk scene. The collection includes scrapbooks, newsclippings, concert posters and fliers, and ephemera from throughout Kweskin's career, along with hundreds of personal and professional photographs of Kweskin, the Jug Band, U and I, and later collaborations. As an historian of American music, Kweskin also assembled discographies of major artists and labels and built a library of works on blues, country, and other forms of popular music, along with hundreds of 78 rpm records, 45s, LPs, and compact disc recordings. Finally, there are hundreds of reel to reel, cassette, CD, and DVD recordings of Kweskin from throughout his career.

Background on Jim Kweskin

Born on July 18, 1940 in Stamford, Connecticut to Yale and Florence Kweskin, Jim Kweskin has been a music lover all of his life. His initial interest in music came from listening to his father's collection of jazz 78s, which would also influence Jim's collecting tendencies. Jim enrolled at Boston University in 1959, where he became a part of the growing folk revival occurring in Cambridge. Fellow musicians Jim Rooney, Joan Baez, Eric Von Schmidt, Betsy Siggins, and others were active in the Boston-Cambridge folk scene at this time. Attending shows in coffee houses and seeing others playing, Jim was inspired to learn guitar. After hearing Eric Von Schmidt play at Club Passim (then known as Club Mount Auburn 47) in 1962, Jim realized that it was possible to mix jazz and folk together; inspired by this, he developed a a fingerpicking style infused with jazz elements for which he became famous.

Jim had traveled in California for a while before driving cross-country back to Cambridge in the winter of 1962. It was around this time that he formed the Jug Band with an initial lineup consisting of Fritz Richmond, Geoff Muldaur, Bob Siggins, and Bruno Wolfe; later incarnations of the band included Maria Muldaur, Mel Lyman, Bill Keith, and Richard Greene. Modernizing pre-World War II rural music, the Jug Band quickly gained a following. Between 1963 and 1968 the Jug Band released several albums, including Jug Band Music (1965), See Reverse Side for Title (1966), and Whatever Happened to Those Good Old Days (1968).

The Jug Band quickly became popular, making numerous appearances in New England, including the 1963 Hootenanny at Carnegie Hall with Phil Ochs and others. The group was also on television, appearing on The Steve Allen Show and The Tonight Show. Aside from regular shows at Club 47 and other popular coffee houses, Jim Kweskin and the Jug Band played at the Newport Folk Festival from 1965 to 1967. Famously, Mel Lyman took to the stage after Bob Dylan's controversial set to perform "Rock of Ages" on harmonica to calm the riled up crowd.

Despite their success, the Jug Band disbanded in 1968. Jim joined Mel Lyman at the Fort Hill Community, a commune founded in 1967 in the Fort Hill section of Roxbury in Boston. The community had various creative outlets, including publishing an underground newspaper called Avatar, but would eventually become known for building and restoring houses, a business which evolved into Fort Hill Construction. Jim took a break from recording and performing for several years in the 1980s and 1990s to focus on this house construction aspect of the Fort Hill Community. However, he would perform with the U & I Band, which consisted of people from Fort Hill, including George and Anthony Gude, Rose Geurin, Ray Charles Lyman, Gabriel Peper, and Samoa Wilson. In 1986, the U & I Band played with Pete Seeger at the Clearwater Festival.

Starting in the early aughts, Jim actively returned to music, performing solo and with friends. One of the acts that Jim performed with during this time was the Jim Kweskin Band with Samoa Wilson. Jim and Samoa recorded a few albums together including Now and Again (2003), Live the Life (2004), and more recently I Just Want to Be Horizontal (2020). Jim also performed with Meredith Axelrod, Suzy Thompson, Happy Traum, Juli Crockett and her bands, and others. One of Jim's frequent performance collaborators is his old Jug Band friend, Geoff Muldaur; together, the two released the album Penny's Farm (2016), and both performed in The Texas Sheiks

There were brief reunions of members of the Jug Band in 2006 as part of tribute performances for Fritz Richmond, the Jug Band's jug and wash tub player who passed away at the end of 2005. Jim Kweskin, Geoff Muldaur, Maria Muldaur, and Bill Keith reunited again in 2013 to embark on a 50th anniversary reunion tour, which took them across the United States and to Japan. Jim would visit Japan several times on tours, including for tribute concerts in 2005 after Fritz Richmond's passing and a tour with Samoa Wilson.

Jim's recent albums, Never Too Late: Duets With My Friends (2024) and Doing Things Right (2025), feature frequent collaborators such as Maria Muldaur, Samoa Wilson, Meredith Axelrod, and Suzy Thompson, as well as his granddaughter, Fiona Kweskin.

Jim continues to tour and perform.

Scope of collection

The Jim Kweskin Collection contains a wealth of material documenting the professional life of a man who made integral contributions to the folk revival of the 1960s. A plethora of performance material is included in the form of contracts, fliers and posters, clippings and reviews, event calendars, and setlists. Photographs depict performances from throughout Kweskin's career, and there are also family photos along with a small collection of personal material from Kweskin's life in the Fort Hill Community.

The collection consists primarily of Kweskin's personal music collection of over 3000 recordings in the form of audio cassettes, CDs, DVDs, 78s, reel-to-reel tapes, and videocassettes. While a couple hundred of these recordings are Kweskin's own material, both as a solo artist and performing as part of a band or with friends, the vast majority are artists that Kweskin collected.

Series descriptions

Series 1. Performance & Professional Material

1962-2019
7 boxes

Contains material related to Jim Kweskin's performances as a solo artist, in collaboration with friends like Geoff Muldaur, or in various bands, such as the Jim Kweskin Jug Band and The U & I Band. Much of the material is promotional in nature, with fliers, clippings, reviews, and posts in various publications about upcoming shows, as well as set lists for performances. Promotional material has been separated by band, but otherwise all types of promotional material are grouped together. Full newsletters and magazines are also organized as promotional material, with further information as to title of publication and page number(s) on which band references appear in context notes for those specific folders. There are also performance and recording contracts, material related to specific tours in Japan and the 50th reunion of the Jug Band, and ephemera such as badges and tickets from festival performances, buttons, and shirts.

Series 2. Photographs

1940-2017
3 boxes

Contains a variety of photograph material related to Jim Kweskin's career as well as home and family life. The majority of photographs are candid performance shots from the Jug Band performing at Newport Folk Festival, to the U & I Band performing with Pete Seeger, and tours to Japan with Geoff Muldaur, the Jug Band reunion, and Samoa Wilson. Along with performance photos, there are photographs from album cover photoshoots.

Series 3. Correspondence

1964-2019
.5 boxes

This series contains letters written to or by Jim, spanning the entirety of his career. Some correspondence is professional in nature and details performance plans or fan letters; other correspondence is more personal, touching on the lives of family and friends; and then there is correspondence that falls in between, with friends often writing to Jim to express their joy at seeing him perform.

Series 4. Personal Material

1962-2013
.5 boxes

A small part of the collection, this series contains Jim Kweskin's personal material related to Fort Hill Community, Fort Hill Construction, and artwork and clippings about some of the people who grew up in Fort Hill.

Series 5. Music Research Material

1908-2017
9 boxes

The largest part of the collection, this series contains all material related to Jim Kweskin's own research and collection of music. There are over a hundred biographies and discographies of older blues, folk, and R&B artists, as well as specific record companies. Includes old lists that Kweskin made of the records and tapes in his collection, as well as his correspondence and research for his project to create a Woody Guthrie discography. There are also magazines and other publications marketed to record collectors, articles, posters, and ephemera.

Series 6. Audiovisual Material

1940-2017
54 boxes

This series contains all audiovisual material in the collection and is separated into two subseries:

Subseries 6A contains recordings on which Jim appears, and the collection of recordings that he has amassed. Material includes performances in which Jim participated in at McCabe's and Club Passim, for example, as well as masters and mixes from tracks that appear on Jim's albums.

Subseries 6B showcases the impressive collection of albums by blues, folk, and R&B artists that Jim acquired. These are organized by artist's first and last name, or band name, and identified by format, which includes cassettes, compact discs, reel-to-reel tapes, LPs, videocassettes, and DVDs.

This series is still being processed.
