Read collection overview

Since its founding 1991, the Center for the Study of Art and Community has been devoted to arts-based community development: the philosophy that human creativity is essential to the development of caring and capable communities. Founded by Bill Cleveland, the CSAC is an association of creative leaders from several cultural sectors, including business, government, and the arts, that seeks new cultural partnerships to integrate arts and creative expression into community life. Their projects have played out in schools, symphony halls, and neighborhood associations, but also in factories, jails, senior centers, unemployment offices.

The records of the CSAC offer extensive documentation of the movement to facilitate the role of arts and creativity in community development and an organization dedicated to fostering cultural partnerships that touch on sectors of the community from education and human services to public safety, faith groups.

Background on Center for the Study of Art and Community

Since its founding 1991, the Center for the Study of Art and Community has been devoted to arts-based community development: the philosophy that human creativity is essential to the development of caring and capable communities. Founded by Bill Cleveland, the CSAC is an association of creative leaders from several cultural sectors, including business, government, and the arts, that seeks new cultural partnerships to integrate arts and creative expression into community life. Their projects have played out in schools, symphony halls, and neighborhood associations, but also in factories, jails, senior centers, unemployment offices.

CSA&C clients include artists and arts organizations, educational health, human services, and criminal justice agencies, state and local government, and business and philanthropic communities. CSA&C is active in several areas: training, research and evaluation, planning, and facilitation.

Scope of collection

The records of the CSAC offer extensive documentation of the movement to facilitate the role of arts and creativity in community development and an organization dedicated to fostering cultural partnerships that touch on sectors of the community from education and human services to public safety, faith groups.

Inventory

CityKids
ca. 1990-2005
Box 1

10 videos. City kids is a youth development organization using the arts to allow young people to identify issues that are important to them and applying the creative process to addressing those issues in the social political and economic arenas. There are 10 videos here that were produced by city kids in the 1990s and early 2000's. They document some of the early work that they did in New York City under the directorship of artist- organizer Laurie Meadoff. CityKids is one of the organizations documented in my book Art in Other Places.

Susan Lacey, Oakland Police Department

Box 1

3 videos. These tapes document work done by Suzanne Lacy during her time at the California College of Arts and Crafts in collaboration with the Oakland police Department. The project was an effort to use large scale collaborative community-based art projects to bridge the significant gap between young people and the police department in the city of Oakland

CETA Arts

Box 1

This is a documentary created by the US Department of labor to describe DOL's significant investment in arts-based community development work throughout the US under the auspice is The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) during the late 1970's. As far as I know there are only a few copies of this documentary remaining. It was made near the end of the Carter administration just before the CETA Arts program was dismantled by the Reagan administration. Obviously it is old and very important. I worked as a CETA artist and arts administrator at the Sacramento Arts Commission during this time.

Godot in San Quentin

Box 1

This is a work in progress directors cut of a half hour documentary produced by filmmaker John Riley as a part of an international research project called the Beckett Project. The Beckett Project sought to document Samuel Beckett's work processes and projects for posterity in the latter days of his life. This particular documentary describes the work of Royal Swedish theater director Jan Janson who produced a historic inmate acted version of Waiting for Godot. The production had five performances before both free and prisoner audiences. Although a version of this documentary appears be available online this version is unique and rare. It is also likely fragile. I was directing the Arts-in-Corrections Program for the California Department of Correction at the time.

California Arts in Corrections

Box 1

4 videos. These are various videos from classes in California prisons document some of the actual workshops and artwork that were created by prisoners and artist faculty members during the Arts In Corrections program in California during the 80s and 90s. One of these tapes I believe is also an interview with me about the Arts In Corrections program. Another titled Walking Smooth is video work produced by students of filmmaker Gary Glassman at the California Men's facility in what is called prison valley near Ontario California. Gary's workshop which went on for years at CMC was a very advanced video and digital training program.

Minnesota artist and educator institute

Box 1

4 vidoes. During the 90s and early 2000's the Minnesota Center for Arts Education convened a state wide forum for exchange among and between artists arts educators and other school personnel. It was uniquely organized using open space technology, which is a creative practice unto itself. The result was what some people called the Woodstock of arts education. Each year a documentary was made that tried to tell the story of what ensued among the three or 400 participants over the course of these five day gatherings. My guess is there are not many copies of these annual documentaries. These should be cross referenced with compendiums of Open Space documents produced at the various Artist and Educator Institutes

Community-based art project documentaries

Box 1

6 videos. This is a random collection of documentaries that tell the story of different arts-based community development projects around the US and in one case overseas. They include the work of Maryo Ewell, Lily Yeh, William Cochran, Tory Read, and multiple composers Who worked as composers in residence as a part of the NEA's millennial Continental Harmony project developed by the American Composers Forum. The Center designed and conducted the evaluation of Continental Harmony project.

Art and Upheaval videos

Box 1

5 videos. These tapes tell the story of some of the programs that I researched during the writing of the book Art and Upheaval. Three of them come from Northern Ireland's Community Arts Forum which is documented in the book. Another is from Las Madres de las Plaza de Mayo a group of mothers who conducted an arts-based campaign in Argentina to protest the disappearance of their children by the military Junta.

Creative exchange towards a culture of renewal

Box 1

1 video. This is a documentary about a European-based organization that gathered information and research on the work of artists across the globe in the area of arts-based community development. This organization was innovative and ahead of his time in their support for artists throughout South America Africa and Asia working to better their communities. Unfortunately Creative Exchange closed a decade ago. I do not know if any of their archives have survived. The vidoe is recorded using the European format.

Arts and youth development

Box 1

8 videos. This is an eclectic collection of documentaries and documented work about various artists working with young people. Some of them are connected to arts in education, and others connected to art in youth development through social service.

Speeches: Bill Cleveland

Box 1

3 videos.

Documentarties: art and social change

Box 1

5 videos. This is a potpourri of documentaries that run the gamut from a feminist exploration of the convergence of art and political action, to a video of a play created at Gallaudet University by deaf actors. Another is a video of a play called Struck Dumb that is an original script created and performed by actors at the Short Center, an arts program for people with disabilities in Sacramento California. Also included is a short 10-minute documentary about a writing instructor named Jane Ibur in St. Louis who is a part of the Community Arts Training Institute (CAT) that has been taking place there for the last 22 years. CAT was the first local community arts training program established by participants in the original AES summer community arts training workshops. I help design CAT and have taught there every year since its inception.

Art and Upheaval interviews

Box 1

Cassette and DAT tapes. Many of these interviews we're conducted with artists and community activists whose stories did not end up in the book. These include call Joe Samuels from Liberia, John Bergman from Geise, theater for corrections, William Cochran A community artist whose work is documented in a video in this box called the community bridge, and Jordan Simmons who is the founder of the East Bay Center for the Performing Arts in Richmond California.

Box 1

Cassette and DAT tapes. Interviews conducted for the book art and up evil that contributed to chapters on South Africa and Northern Ireland. Interviews conducted for the book art and upheaval. These interviews were conducted for the Cambodia, Watts Prophets, and the Dah Theatre chapters. There is also a series of interviews with artists and teachers conducted in the wake of the Columbine High School shooting describing the role of the arts in the post tragedy healing that took place in the days after the tragedy.

Art and Upheavel

Box 1

Microcassettes. A collection of interviews conducted with the members of Dah Theatre in Belgrade for the DAH chapter in Art and upheaval.

Art and Upheaval Artists on the World's Front Lines

Box 2

Australia, Reyum (Cambodia), South Africa, Watts Prophets, Dah Teatar (Serbia).

Gatherings and convenings: Open Space Technology Documentation
2003-2007

Box 3

A dance Community Gathering: how can we collectively enhance and support our efforts to make Minnesota a place where dance and dance artists thrive? Minnesota Artist Educators Institute: 5 day Gatherings sponsored by the Perpich Center for Arts Education that were once described as the Woodstock of Arts Education: Years: 2003, 2004, 2005. Intermedia Arts Community Cultural Development Leadership Summit 2004: A national/regional gathering. Keynote, Grace Lee Boggs. Up the River: The Annual Retreat for Amazon.com; 2006, 2007: This is somewhat clandestine in nature, given that I had to sign a non-disclosure agreement. But its interesting just the same.

Training materials: manuals and booklets developed for CSA&C Training Programs and others
1993-2002

Box 3

Common Sense and Common Ground: Building successful Arts Collaborations in Communities and Schools. Arts Extension Service Community Arts Partnership Institute: Conducted in conjunction with the Mississippi Arts Commission, 1996. There is also a bibliography in the folder from the initial AES Arts for a Change 3 day course presented at the 1993 Summer Program in Arts Management. July 7-9 1993. It was hot! Nautilus Music Theater: Artist-Educator Collaboration Workshop materials. Developed in conjunction with Nautilus Music Theater, St Paul, MN, 1998. The Gallery 37 Model: A resource manual for designing an arts-based youth development program. Social Application of the Arts: University of Washington: January 2000. Boys and Girls Club of Delaware: Pegasus Artworks Statewide Boys and Girls Club Community Arts Training Program 2001-2002. Community Arts training program presented with the Heinz Foundation and the Pittsburgh Center for the Arts, : Includes a paper by Lynn Connor exploring various community arts training models in the US. This paper includes interviews with representatives from the Urban Arts Institute, Urban Bush Women, Alternate Roots, and others, 1999. Building A Field: The Arts Professional in Youth and Community Development, Minneapolis 2000. Material from Mississippi Arts Council, MS Communities in Schools—Core Arts Program for adjudicated youth. I worked with these folks for 15 years developing programs for kids in the MS juvenile justice system. Extraordinary people, great work in a difficult place. UCLA ArtsReach: Forms and Bibliography: ArtsReach was the California Department of Corrections southern California partner for the Arts-In-Corrections program I was running then (1982-1994). They managed hundreds of residencies in SOCAL prisons. These are some of the materials they used to orient and train artists for work in prisons.

CSA&C Research/Studies

Box 4

Putting the Arts to Work

Box 10
US Dept of Labor: 1979, A companion documentary workbook compiled by DOL and AL Nellum and Associates for a series of 6 regional conferences designed to advance artists work in communities supported through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). This largely un-intentional investment in cultural community development provided the impetus and foundation for the emergence of the community arts movement in the US during later third of the 20th Century. This is likely one of very few of these workbooks in existence.

ArtsWorkBooks

Box 10

US Dept. of Labor: 1980: A next iteration workbook created for the 1980 edition of DOL's CETA arts regional conferences. Also, very rare. Very shortly after these conferences were convened, the Reagan administration shut down the CETA arts effort, and, as I understand from anecdotal evidence, destroyed most of its documentary material. A video created by DOL documenting the CETA Arts phenomenon is in box #1.

Living Stateg Workbook

Box 10

The published heart and soul script from Living Stage Theater's pioneering community theater program. Used as source material for artists work in community.

California Arts Council: Artists in Social Institutions Research

Box 10

A study undertaken by the Educational Testing Service, documenting the programing and impact of the Arts Council's ground breaking Artists in Social Institutions Program. This is very early research in a field that was only just emerging from its CETA genesis. The CAC's AISI Program was a first, and one of a kind. The research is both unique in its approach and its subject.

San Francisco Festival

Box 11

Festival 2000 was a major effort undertaken to demonstrate how an international multi-cultural arts festival can both build new levels of access in local community and become a signature global event. The material included shows both the extraordinary artistic ambition of the project as well as the rocky road it traveled. I served on one if its advisory committees.
