Darby Penney, born in 1952, was herself a psychiatric survivor and devoted her life to activism and support of the psychiatric consumer/survivor/ex-patient (C/S/X) movement. Above all, she believed the voices of survivors themselves should be used in policy and program design, and she spent the latter part of her life collecting those voices in her C/S/X Oral History Project. Penney worked for the New York State Office of Mental Health for almost fifteen years, with roles including Director of Recipient Affairs and Director of Historical Projects, until she was let go in 2003 due to her outspoken views on coercive treatment of patients. This freed her to devote her time to creating nonprofits and advocacy groups for the C/S/X movement, as well as overseeing the Oral History Project. She designed a museum exhibit to give voice to the patients of Willard State Hospital, based on the contents of more than four hundred suitcases found in the hospital's attic, and coauthored a book called The Lives They Left Behind: Suitcases from a State Hospital Attic, published in 2008. Penney died in 2021.

The Darby Penney Papers comprise Penney's research on psychiatric treatment and patient narratives, her writings and presentations, and her oral history work, including over two hundred interviews done by the C/S/X Oral History Project. The documentation, cassette tapes, and transcripts of this project form the bulk of the collection.

Background on Darby Penney

Darby Penney's outspoken nature and unwavering principles made her a fierce activist for the psychiatric survivors movement. Penney brought the voices of patients and survivors to the forefront, advocating for their inclusion in psychiatric history, policy-making, and program development, all of which to that point featured the views of doctors and scientists over all else.

A psychiatric survivor herself, Penney was born in 1952 in Oceanside, N. Y. Having trained and worked as a librarian at the SUNY University at Albany in 1980, she shifted careers in 1987 and took a job at the New York State Office of Mental Health (OMH). Shortly after her work there began, she married Dr. Kenneth Denberg, an English professor and widely published poet with whom she co-edited a poetry magazine called The Snail's Pace Review.

In 1989, Penney attended a state advisory committee meeting and for the first time internalized how little say patients had in their own psychiatric care; she realized that she identified more with those patients than she did with the staff at the meeting. Seeing Penney's drive for the cause of patient inclusion in treatment and policy, OMH created a new position for her, the Director of the Office of Recipient Affairs, in 1992. Over the next decade, Penney devoted herself to the consumer/survivor/ex-patient (C/S/X) movement, using skills she had developed as a librarian to research and collect information about controversial topics like involuntary treatment and electroconvulsive therapy to affect policy and program development within OMH. She was also active outside of her professional job, as a founding member and president of the National Association of Consumer/Survivor Mental Health Administrators (NAC/SMHA) and a board member of the National Association for Rights Protection and Advocacy (NARPA). In the late 1990s, she helped found the Peer Accreditation Association to help peer-led therapy groups, and she also founded the Consumer/Survivor/ Ex-Patient Oral History Project to preserve the voices of those affected by mental health issues and psychiatric institutionalization. Because of this work, she became the Director of Historical Projects at OMH, where she was a liaison to the State Archives of New York. She was contacted by Willard State Hospital in Ovid, N.Y., where more than four hundred suitcases belonging to past patients had been found in the hospital's attic. Penney used this opportunity to showcase the lives of these patients and provide a platform for their voices in what would later become museum exhibits and the basis for her 2008 book, The Lives They Left Behind: Suitcases from a State Hospital Attic.

Penney's vocal activism against coercive psychiatric treatment put her at odds with the OMH, and she lost her job in 2003. Though she regretted she could not do more from within the state system, she came to terms with the fact that she and her colleagues could not fight against such a strong system that did not want to change. Outside of the system, she continued her research-intensive approach to ex-patient advocacy and became the president and executive director of Community Consortium, a nonprofit, peer-run organization to help with advocacy and representation in the mental health community. She also helped found the International Network of Treatment Alternatives for Recovery in order to help patients find alternatives to overly prescribed medications. Her museum exhibits, conference presentations, and oral history projects allowed the voices of the C/S/X community to be heard on a level never accomplished before. Penney continued her work until her death from cancer in 2021.

Scope of collection

The Darby Penney Papers document the methodical way Penney approached her activism in the psychiatric survivors movement from the late 1980s to the early 2000s, incorporating her librarian skills with those she learned as an administrator in order to give her passionate voice a foundation in solid, fact-based research. Included in the collection are Penney's research materials on psychiatric treatment and patient narratives, writings and presentations. The bulk of the Penney collection consists of the work she did collecting patient narratives of their psychiatric experiences in the form of the C/S/X Oral History Project. This oral history work, considered pioneering by the New York State Archives, is in the form of audiocassettes and videotapes as well as transcripts.

Series descriptions

Series 1. Research, proposals, and writings

This series contains Penney's published writings, the articles used in her research over the course of her career, publicity clippings, and proposals for projects and funding for organizations she helped create. There are scripts for her museum exhibits and presentations and recordings of conferences she took part in. Also included are Penney's notes, proposals, and drafts for her notable Willard suitcase project, culminating in the book The Lives They Left Behind: Suitcases from a State Hospital Attic as well as museum exhibits based on her findings. Some of the materials are on CD-Rom, audiotape, videotape, and floppy disk.

Series 2. Oral history project

The bulk of this series consists of the audio recordings, transcripts, and release forms of interview subjects that took part in the consumer/survivor/ex-patient oral history project. Some real names have been redacted at the request of subjects. Most of the transcripts are on 3.5 inch floppy disks; the audio recordings are on audiocassette.
