Background on Eric Mann and Lian Hurst Mann

Revolutionary organizers, writers, and theorists, Eric Mann and Lian Hurst Mann have been active in the struggle for civil rights for decades. The son of Jewish Socialist and labor organizers from New York, Mann came of age during the early phases of the Civil Rights movement and after graduating from Cornell (1964), he became field secretary for the Congress of Racial Equality. Increasingly radicalized through exposure to Black revolutionary nationalists, Mann took part in the Newark Community Union Project and became a leader in anti-imperialist opposition to the war in Vietnam as a New England regional coordinator for the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and later with Weatherman. Following a militant demonstration at the Harvard Center for International Affairs late in 1969, Mann was convicted of assault on the basis of perjured testimony and sentenced to two years in prison. An organizer even behind bars, he was moved frequently, and after being released early in July 1971 he continued his prison activism through the Red Prison Movement. At the same time, as a writer, he earned a national audience for Comrade George, his account of the life, politics, and assassination of Soledad Brother George Jackson.

Meanwhile, Lian Hurst was spending her adolescent years growing up in Los Angeles in the early 1960s as the daughter of a successful architect. During her own undergraduate architectural studies at the University of California at Berkeley, she met and married Peter Bailey, a fellow activist, though the marriage was short-lived. After graduating from Berkeley in 1969, Lian focused on her architectural work with a particular interest in women in architecture, and became heavily involved with feminist women's organizations. She was one of the founding members of the Berkeley/Oakland Women's Union (BOWU), a socialist feminist organization to carry on the struggle of the women's movement.

While feeling himself at a low point in his radical career, Eric Mann met Lian Hurst while vacationing in Mexico during the summer 1974. By 1975 the two married and Eric moved to the Berkeley area to join Lian. At her urging, the two took part in Marxist Leninist party building, joining the August Twenty-Ninth Movement (ATM), a recently-formed Chicano communist organization concerned with Marx's "National Question" as it related to Chicano people. They both decided to seek employment in manufacturing to become union organizers from the inside, first in various factories and shipyards in the San Francisco Bay area, and eventually with the United Auto Workers. During that time, the ATM merged with I Work Kuen, a Marxist revolutionary Asian organization to create the newly-formed League of Revolutionary Struggle (LRS). Their family grew with the birth of daughters in 1977 and 1980. In 1981, Eric and Lian were reassigned to Los Angeles to continue union organizing efforts at General Motors plants in the area where they led a campaign to keep the Van Nuys assembly plant open (1982-1992). With the move, Lian resumed professional architectural work and began work on her PhD.

In 1989, Eric founded the Labor/Community Strategy Center, focusing on building capacity for oppressed groups to work toward self-determination. By 1990, Lian completed her PhD and held various leadership roles in architectural professional organizations. Several years later, she took on primary responsibility for the National School for Strategic Organizing within the LCSC. The LCSC has been active in various efforts locally in Los Angeles to combat unfair public transportation practices, and to work toward climate justice and other civil rights. The LCSC has also developed important international partnerships both with the UN World Conference Against Racism in Durban, South Africa and the UN World Conference on Sustainable Development in Johannesburg. As of the receipt of this collection in 2007, their work continues, helping to build consciousness, leadership, and organization within communities of color. Both Manns continue to write and agitate in the cause of revolutionary change.

For a more detailed timeline of their work and lives compiled by Lian, see Box 12, Folder 17.

Scope of collection

The Eric Mann and Lian Hurst Mann Papers collection documents the lives of two revolutionary organizers, writers and theorists, whose work focused on helping oppressed groups build the capacity for self-determination. The collection provides a chronicle of their work first individually as young activists in the 1960s and early 1970s, then together, taking on different causes and organizing those involved to effect change.

The collection consists of seven series, and is arranged alphabetically by folder title within each series. The first two series--1) Architecture: Academic and Professional Work (Lian) and 2) Women's Rights and Issues (Lian)--focus on Lian Hurst Mann's work individually. Series 3--Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) Activity and Prison Life (Eric)--captures Eric's activism individually prior to meeting Lian. The next two series--4) August Twenty-Ninth Movement (ATM)/League of Revolutionary Struggle (LRS) (Eric and Lian) and 5) Labor/Community Strategy Center (LCSC) (Eric and Lian) document their work together organized around several organizations in which they played pivotal roles, with Series 4 making up the largest series in the collection. Series 6, the second largest in the collection--Published Writing and Public Speaking (Eric and Lian)--contains many examples of their prolific authorship. Series 7--Historical Context--includes material from the collection that sheds light on the political and social climate in which they were working.

The collection includes a large number of abbreviations. The following guide, though not exhaustive, is provided for many of the abbreviations used in the records.

Series descriptions

Series 1. Architecture: Academic and Professional Work \(Lian\)

1971-1998

This series includes records documenting aspects of Lian Hurst Mann's professional life as an architect. It includes artifacts from Lian's undergraduate and graduate work in architecture at Berkeley, including her master's thesis, a paper written for a class during her doctoral program, and her doctoral dissertation. It includes issues of the journal "Architecture California" for which she served as editor, with each issue including an editorial piece written by her. Her involvement in several different professional associations consist of records regarding the Association for Women in Architecture, including her year as President of the organization, and the American Institute of Architects, including her candidacy for Regional Director. The series also includes conference materials from several different sets of professional conferences she attended that focused on the work of women architects. Records of her involvement in the Berkeley Radical Psychiatry Organization during her time at Berkeley include a statement of the principles of unity and an informational handout about the "October Collective," a subset group of BRPO dedicated to training and education about radical psychiatry. The materials related to "Building Systems Development," an architectural initiative in which she was involved, included a note from Lian, saying "My first project."

Series 2. Women's Rights and Issues \(Lian\)

1968-1980

This small but noteworthy series contains a wide-ranging set of resources related to Lian's feminist thinking and activity grounded in her Marxist/Leninist philosophy. It includes founding documents, essays, newsletters and personal writing from her involvement with the Berkeley/Oakland Women's Union, as well as other printed materials related to the women's liberation movement. Several papers and essays she wrote as part of involvement in the National Socialist Feminist Conference are included. Her involvement with an International Women's Day March is documented through a script for a slideshow for the event, and an essay written by Lian in response to some anti-gay rhetoric published in conjunction with gay representation during the march. Her interest in women's issues worldwide is represented by newspaper clippings about the sterilization of third-world women and a statement from the Third World Women's Caucus.

Noteworthy in this series are several of Lian's personal journals, expressing her own struggle to understand her gender expression, her sexuality and her place in the world as a woman rejecting traditional women's roles of the times.

Series 3. Students for a Democratic Society \(SDS\) Activity and Prison Life \(Eric\)

1965-1975

Though this is also a small series in the collection, it is noteworthy in its documentation of Eric's initial involvement with SDS, and his subsequent arrest and time in prison. The series contains a few records related to SDS and to his involvement with protests in Newark; for more information on each of these, see resources under "Clippings: Eric in the News" in Box 12 and 13. The bulk of this series consists of personal letters written by Eric to his young daughter Lisa and to his mother. It also contains letters sent to Eric from other prison inmates after he was released from prison, as well as a few records related to the Red Prison Movement.

Note that (according to Lian) Eric's prison name was "Barry," so letters to "Comrade Barry" are to Eric. Also note that he refers to "Nancy" in some of his letters; this is his sister-in-law, married to his brother Richard.

Series 4. August Twenty-Ninth Movement \(ATM\)/League of Revolutionary Struggle \(LRS\)\(Eric and Lian\)

1938-1987

This series is the largest in the collection, and is the first series to document Eric's and Lian's collaboration in their work, focusing on their initial work in the ATM and their continuing work in the LRS. Their work in the ATM is documented in part by essays, leaflets, newsletters and printed material, meeting notes, position statements and internal memos describing work efforts related to Chicano and Asian civil rights, busing for desegregation, and the ATM's relationship to the Communist Party. In particular, the booklet, "Fan the Flames" is an important summary of the Chicano National Question and ATM's reason for being. A large portion of the series focuses on their labor organization efforts in auto workers' unions, spanning their work in the ATM and the LRS, including reports they write regarding ongoing union organization efforts, leaflets recruiting union members and advertising union efforts, and conferences and elections. Another significant portion of the series includes teaching notes from Lian's leadership of Marxist education self-study courses, and Marxist/Leninist education materials dating back to the late 1930s.

Their work in the LRS is documented by founding documents and administrative material of the organization, a summary to the organization written by Eric regarding his involvement with the Jesse Jackson presidential campaign in 1984, and leaflets, proposals, essays and internal memos related to nuclear disarmament efforts.

In addition, there are a number of printed materials, including numerous newspapers issues both of "Revolutionary Cause"-- the newspaper of the ATM-- and "Unity"-- the newspaper of the LRS as well as several examples of materials published by "Getting Together," the publishing arm of I Wor Kuen.

Series 5. Labor/Community Strategy Center \(LCSC\)\(Eric and Lian\)

1981-2007

This smaller series contains primarily publications from the LCSC between 1994-2005. In addition to some issues of "Ahora Now," the quarterly publication of the LCSC, the series includes published papers and reports rejecting the 1992 federal "Weed and Seed" program in Los Angeles, proposing a plan for urban transportation and highlighting the work of the highly successful Bus Riders' Union, defending immigrants' rights and outlining a vision for reconstructing Los Angeles. The series also contains a complete list of LCSC publications as of 2006, compiled by Eric and Lian. Finally, a few curriculum notes from Lian's work with the National School for Strategic Organizing make up a small but noteworthy part of the series.

Series 6. Published Writing and Public Speaking \(Eric and Lian\)

1968-2007

As Eric and Lian are both prolific writers and speakers, this series is the second largest in the collection, including many articles, essays and transcripts from speaking engagements for which Eric or Lian are authors. Among the publications are a report entitled "L.A.'s Lethal Air" that Eric published in 1991. One folder of materials includes documents that they co-authored. The series is organized alphabetically (Eric, Joint Authorship and Lian), then chronologically within those groupings.

Series 7. Historical Context

1964-2006

This final smaller series includes various elements of the collection that provide broader historical context for their work. It includes one folder of articles relevant to their work that they collected, though the articles do not mention them specifically nor are they authors of the articles. Several folders and an additional oversize box include newspaper clippings, actual newspaper issues or reprints of newspaper issues in which Eric appears in the news, though he is not the author of any of the articles.

Very valuable to researchers, the series also includes a personal timeline compiled by Eric and Lian spanning 1960-2006, listing significant events by year for each of them individually as well as the two of them together, and a listing of significant historical events that were taking place in that year.
