The sharp revival of the U.S. political right in the late 1970s and early 1980s was accompanied by a proliferation of white supremacist and other extremist organizations. Drawing on a mix of Neo-Nazi, white supremacist, Christian supremacist, and Libertarian ideologies, long-established organizations such as the John Birch Society, newly formed coalitions, and a new generation of leaders such as David Duke sought to shift the American political spectrum rightward through both formal political means and underground agitation.

The Radical Right Collection consists of newspapers, newsletters, and other publications from far-right organizations during the late 1960s through 1980s, along with associated ephemera and lists of extremist literature. The collection includes a significant run of the white supremacist magazine Instauration, the Neo-Nazi newspapers Attack and National Vanguard, the National Alliance Bulletin, and Richard Berkeley Cotten's Conservative Viewpoint, along with publications from Christian rightists Gerald L. K. Smith (The Cross and the Flag), Billy James Hargis (Christian Crusade), and Chick Publications.

Background

The sharp revival of the U.S. political right in the late 1970s and early 1980s was accompanied by a proliferation of white supremacist and other extremist organizations. Drawing on a mix of Neo-Nazi, white supremacist, Christian supremacist, and Libertarian ideologies, long-established organizations such as the John Birch Society, newly formed coalitions, and a new generation of leaders such as David Duke sought to shift the American political spectrum rightward through both formal political means and underground agitation.

Scope of collection

The Radical Right Collection consists of newspapers, newsletters, and other publications from far-right organizations during the late 1970s through 1980s, along with associated ephemera and lists of extremist literature. The collection includes a significant run of the white supremacist magazine Instauration, the Neo-Nazi newspapers Attack and National Vanguard, Thunderbolt, and the National Alliance Bulletin, and Richard Berkeley Cotten's Conservative Viewpoint, along with publications from Christian rightists Gerald L. K. Smith (The Cross and the Flag), Billy James Hargis (Christian Crusade), and Chick Publications.

The provenance of part of this collection is uncertain, but most of the extremist material appears to have sent to Philip A. Anderson. Born in Galveston County, Texas, in 1923, Anderson moved to Amherst with his family as a child and after service with the Army during the Second World War, lived in the region until relocating to North Carolina in 1995. Materials on right wing Christian groups were collected primarily by Milton Cantor of the UMass Amherst Department of History.

Series descriptions

Series 1. Periodicals

1964-1994

80 folders

Dating primarily from the 1970s through mid-1980s, the periodicals in this series include significant runs of newspapers, newsletters, and magazines from white supremacist, Christian supremacist, racist, and right-extremist organizations, including the Ku Klux Klan, Neo-Nazi organizations, militia movement supporters, and Libertarians. Among the organizations represented are the National Alliance, the John Birch Society, the Christian Defense League, and David Duke's National Association for the Advancement of White People.

Series 2. Publications and ephemera
