Denise Karuth and Fred Pelka are activists and historians of the disability rights movement based in Massachusetts. Both are graduates of SUNY Buffalo, while Karuth holds a masters in rehabilitation counseling from Boston State College and a masters in divinity from the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge. Karuth came into activism through her church's involvement in the civil rights movement and her own experience as a student dealing with blindness and multiple sclerosis at the State University of New York at Buffalo. After moving to Boston, her activism continued in efforts by the disability community to secure accessible and affordable mass transit in Massachusetts, and she has been involved with a broad spectrum of disability campaigns and organizations, serving as a peer counselor for people with disabilities, as Executive Director of Boston Self-Help Center, as a consultant on disability issues for the Human Genome Initiative, as a grant writer at the Stavros Center for Independent Living, and as Chair of the Governor's Commission on Accessible Transportation under Gov. Michael Dukakis. She has also been an advocate for people who are homeless and was a principal founder of the First Church Shelter of the First Church in Cambridge. Karuth's lifelong partner Fred Pelka, himself a person with disabilities, became involved in disability rights activism in 1983 while working at the Boston Center for Independent Living, and has made an impact as an editor and prolific author since. A 2004 Guggenheim Fellow, he has written three books on disability issues: The ABC-CLIO Companion to the Disability Rights Movement (1997), The Civil War Letters of Charles F. Johnson, Invalid Corps (2004), and What We Have Done: An Oral History of the Disability Rights Movement (2012). His fourth book, A Different Blaze, was published by Hedgerow Books in 2014, and is his first published poetry.

The Karuth and Pelka collection documents thirty years of social justice activism in Massachusetts centered on the movement for disability rights. Beginning in the 1980s struggle for accessibility in transportation, the collection reflects the breadth of Karuth's commitments and work on issues ranging from apartheid and US imperialism to homelessness and HIV/AIDS, and her work with organizations such as First Church in Cambridge, Amnesty International, Not Dead Yet, the Governor's Council of Accessible Transportation, and the Boston Self Help Center. Pelka's part of the collection contains extensive research and background material, notes, and drafts for each of his books, including lengthy transcripts of interviews with pioneers in disability rights.

Background on Denise Karuth and Fred Pelka

Born prematurely in Buffalo, N.Y., in November 1954, Denise Karuth spent the first several months of life in an incubator, resulting in permanent damage to her eyesight. It was only at the end of her junior year of high school, however, that her visual disability was formally acknowledged, and only while a student at SUNY Buffalo that she was identified as legally blind. Starting college as a music major, she gradually tapped into the support services offered by the state's Office of Vocational Rehabilitation, receiving mobility training and assistance in learning to use a guide cane, to read Braille, and to make use of readers and Recordings for the Blind. Hoping to add a specialization in what was then called "exceptional children" -- and to build a career in teaching children with visual disabilities -- she soon encountered an ingrained resistance from her instructors. By their reasoning, a blind person was unsuited to be a teacher of children with disabilities, being too "emotionally involved;" one instructor went so far as to question why she was studying the subject at all.

With growing doubts about her prospects in teaching, Karuth completed her degree in music and relocated to Boston in 1976, having learned that the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind was willing to hire people with visual disabilities. While earning a Masters degree in rehabilitation counseling at Boston College, Karuth's awareness of the need for "safe, reliable, affordable, accessible transportation in all its forms" was greatly sharpened. Living in Brighton, she often found herself waiting for hours on trains only to discover that no one would assist her in boarding, that drivers could not locate the key for the access ramp, or that there was no enough room.

Public transit, Karuth recognized, was a key to people with disabilities in gaining employment, receiving medical care, or performing even the most basic daily routines and became the focus for much of her early activism. From the mid-1980s, when she became confined to a wheelchair, she served on the Governor's Commission on Accessible Transportation and eventually becoming chair. She also began a long and successful career in peer counseling, including stints as Executive Director of the Boston Self Help Center, as a consultant for the Human Genome Initiative, and as a grant writer at the Stavros Center for Independent Living. As Chair of the Massachusetts Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities she helped raise support for passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act in 1990 and she was an outspoken figure in defeating the 2012 state referendum to legalize suicide, arguing, that legalization "will greatly add to a deadly mix of factors that already lead people who are terminally ill to feel that it is time for them to die." Witnessing the example of her own church, the First Church of Cambridge, she was inspired to broaden her activism still further, working with the Cambridge branch of Amnesty International and perhaps most notable, becoming the a principal founder of the First Church Shelter of the First Church in Cambridge and an advocate for people who are homeless. Amidst her other accomplishments, she earned a second master's degree at the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge, Mass. She was ordained in October 2016 and received a call from the North Hadley Congregational Church.

Karuth met her partner Fred Pelka, while the two were undergraduates at SUNY Buffalo. Himself a person with disabilities, Pelka was born into a German immigrant family in Patchogue, N.Y., on October 16, 1954, and like Karuth, he developed an interest in disability at an early age: he received speech therapy as an elementary school student and had a brother who lost a leg in Vietnam. Working as a writer and historian since the 1980s, Pelka became involved in disability rights activism in 1983 while working at the Boston Center for Independent Living and has developed into an important historian of the movement. A 2004 Guggenheim Fellow, he has written three books on disability issues: The ABC-CLIO Companion to the Disability Rights Movement (1997), The Civil War Letters of Charles F. Johnson, Invalid Corps (2004), and What We Have Done: An Oral History of the Disability Rights Movement (2012), the last of which is based on dozens of oral histories with pioneers in the movement, including many collected by Pelka himself. His fourth book, A Different Blaze, was published by Hedgerow Books in 2014, and is his first published poetry.

Scope of collection

The Karuth and Pelka collection documents thirty years of social justice activism in Massachusetts centered on the movement for disability rights. Beginning in the 1980s struggle for accessibility in transportation, the collection reflects the breadth of Karuth's commitments and work on issues ranging from apartheid and U.S. imperialism to homelessness and HIV/AIDS, and her work with organizations such as First Church in Cambridge, Amnesty International, Not Dead Yet, the Governor's Council of Accessible Transportation, and the Boston Self Help Center. Pelka's part of the collection contains extensive research and background material, notes, and drafts for each of his books, including lengthy transcripts of interviews with pioneers in disability rights.

Series descriptions

Series 1. Disability history 1965-2004

Files generated by Pelka in the course of his research on the rise of the disability rights movement. The series is organized into two subseries, the first containing research notes, drafts of writing, and correspondence, and treating a wide variety of topics, from housing and education to leadership, the legal landscape, and institutionalization.

The second subseries contains dozens of oral histories by Pelka recorded mostly on audiocassettes between 1993 and 2010. T with key figures in the national movement, including Fred Fay, Justin Dart, Gunnar Dybwad, and Ted Chabasinski, and others who operated largely at the state and regional levels, such as Elmer Bartels, Chris Palames, and Charlie Carr.

Most of Pelka's interviews and dozens of others he used in writing What We Have Done are housed in the Oral History Center of the Bancroft Library, University of California Berkeley. Most have been digitized and transcribed and are available online.

Series 2. Disability activism 1946-2015

As activists, both Karuth and Pelka had strong ties to a number of institutions and organizations. Revolving around their activism surrounding a wide range of issues, the series offers deep documentation of work -- primarily by Karuth -- on issues in public transportation, along with rich material on the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Boston Center for Independent Living, the Boston Self-Help Center, the Statewide Independent Living Council, as well as for organizations such as the Massachusetts Coalition of Citizens with Disabilities and Not Dead Yet. A number of activists feature prominently as well, including Robert Perske, Thomas Gilhool, Fred Fay, and Justin Dart: Pelka worked as an editor on Dart's autobiography.

Series 3. Non-disability activism 1973-2014

Apart from their commitments to the disability rights movement, Pelka and Karuth were active in social justice causes, particularly during their years living in the Boston area. Both worked with Amnesty International and Pelka was active in Men to End Sexual Assault and other efforts to end sexual assault. The center of much of Karuth's involvement was the First Church of Cambridge, where she helped establish the first homeless shelter, and she was associated with the First Church of Northampton and the United Church of Christ after moving to Western Massachusetts in the late 1990s.

Series 4. Publications 1963-2014

Extensive assortment of newsletters, newspapers, magazines, and other publications relating to the disability rights movement and related topics.

Series 5. Personal/Biographical

1984-2016

A small series of personal correspondence, Karuth's notebooks and sermons.
